multi-generational Seattle-area small business, has added Athena's fast, frictionless Entryway Security Solution to detect concealed weapons. The multi-sensor walk-through metal detector (concealed weapons detection) allows the family owners to quickly and accurately screen anyone entering the business before being allowed inside the store.

"This is exactly why we went into business, to help prevent gun violence before it happens," said Athena Security new CEO Michael Green. "Our hearts went out when we heard that the Aboud family had a gun pulled on them, but we can do so much more than feel for small businesses, we can stop this from happening again, providing the safety and peace of mind we all deserve living and working in our local communities."

Athena Security automatically tells the difference between a weapon and a cell phone, keys and watches, eliminating the need to divest items required by legacy metal detectors, a perfect solution for small businesses to deter and detect concealed weapons.

"We understand that as a jewelry store, we are a target for burglars, but with Athena Security's concealed weapons detection system tech in place, our family and valued customers can rest assured that no one with a concealed weapon is going to gain entry to the store," said Alhareth Aboud, co-owner of Aboud Jewelers whose mother and father were held at gunpoint in the store in May. "We've already had great success with the system alerting us to weapons two times in the first two weeks using the product."
